UTAH FUEL SHOWS RAPID ADVANCES

IMPROVEMENTS WILL MATERIALLY INCREASE OUTPUT

Living Conditions at Its Properties Becoming Excellent—Workmen's Houses Include Light and Water

The Utah Fuel company serves as an excellent example of advances made in Utah coal mining and may be taken as something of an indicator of steps being taken to increase the output for the next year in the coal fields, says the Deseret Saturday News.

This concern has recently completed and put in operation a new set of 26 coke ovens at Sunnyside, making a total of 726 coke ovens at that camp. Also at the camp an old style crushing plant has been replaced with a modern crusher capable of crushing 4000 tons every eight hours. Increased power has been supplied by the installation of a 500 kilowatt turbine generator and a new ventilating fan supplies 300,000 cubic feet of air per minute underground. A similar type of generator has been installed at the Castle Gate camp, all of which contributed greatly to an increased output of coal and sturdier working conditions. Two new mines have been opened up at Castle Gate and one at Clear Creek. The recently completed division of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad at Castle Gate will figure largely in the increased production of next year.

The Utah Fuel company is gradually improving living conditions at its properties and the towns are becoming really worth while as places to live. In Castle Gate twenty new houses have been built; ten in Sunnyside, and twenty-five at Winter Quarters. These houses are of approved design and contain all necessary conveniences, and a luxury or two. For the mine officials houses of the bungalow type have been built, leaving little to be desired in the way of a permanent or temporary residence. The workmen's houses are rented at $19, including light and water and the company has seen to it that its employees are enabled to live under the conditions and manage to save considerable money on their wages.
